A DESCRIPTION OF THE ROADS
IN THE
UNITED STATES.

COMPILED FROM THE MOST AUTHENTIC
MATERIALS,

BY JOHN MELISH.

PHILADELPHIA,
PRINTED BY G. PALMER,
201, Chesnut street.
1844.

DISTRICT OF PENNSYLVANIA, TO WIT:

(L.S.) BE IT REMEMBERED, That on the twenty-second day of August, in the thirty-ninth year of the Independence of the United States of America, A. D. 1814,

JOHN MELISH,
of the said District, hath deposited in this office, the title of a book, the right whereof he claims as author, in the words following, to wit:

"A Description of the Roads in the United States. Compiled from the most authentic materials, by John Melish."

In conformity to the Act of the Congress of the United States, intituled, "An act for the Encouragement of Learning, by securing the Copies of Maps, Charts, and Books, to the Authors and Proprietors of such Copies during the times therein mentioned." And also to the Act, entitled, "An Act supplementary to an Act, entitled "An act for the Encouragement of Learning, by securing the copies of Maps, Charts, and Books, to the Authors and Proprietors of such copies during the times therein mentioned," and extending the Benefits thereof to the arts of designing, engraving, and etching historical and other prints."

D. CALDWELL,
Clerk of the District of Pennsylvania.

ADVERTISEMENT.

IT is pleasing to observe the progress of geographical knowledge. The events of war, though often distressing in their nature, produce at least one good effect: They excite curiosity, and become subservient in a high degree to the dissemination of useful information.

No country is more favourable for the promulgation of geographical knowledge than the United States of America. The great extent of territory—the vast quantity of unsettled lands—the rapid progress of society,—and the circumstance of the inhabitants being equally interested in the prosperity of the country,—all combine to produce a stimulus of a very powerful nature; and this has been so much excited during the present contest with the British government, that the desire for extensive information is general.

The compiler of this work, having systematically engaged in the promulgation of geographical knowledge by the publication of maps, has also been induced to bend his attention to the necessary descriptions, and the result, hitherto, has been stamped by public approbation. That branch of topography which relates to roads and distances, from its great importance, claimed early attention; but such is the extent of the country, and the difficulty of obtaining accurate information on every point, that, although materials have been collecting for several years, it was only of late that they were judged of sufficient importance to be laid before the public.

The original design was only to insert the most important roads leading from the CAPITAL, and from the PRINCIPAL CITIES, to the extremities of the country; but it was afterwards judged advisable to extend it so as to include every material road in the country, and to arrange it in the present form, as that most generally useful, and most congenial to the forms of government in the United States.

This arrangement embraces,

- I. THE GREAT and DIRECT ROADS from WASHINGTON to the extremities of the country, constructed so as to include the seats of all the state and territorial governments.

II. The most important cross roads leading from the principal cities across the country.

III. The state roads, embracing the principal roads in the several states and territories, not included in the two former articles.

In filling up the outline, recourse has been had to the best materials. The department of the general post-office has attended to the subject with laudable care, and much useful information has been derived from the table of post-offices, and their distances from Washington. The result of a very important survey of the great line of road from Robbinston, in Maine, to St. Mary's, in Georgia, has just been published, and is incorporated with this work. Bradley's very excellent map of the United States, and the various state maps from actual survey, have afforded much useful information; and the work has been enriched by accurate and minute descriptions, furnished by travellers and surveyors.

From the great labour that has been bestowed upon the subject, the publisher hopes that it will be found to merit public approbation; but it is presented with diffidence, from a conviction, that the errors in a first edition of a work of this nature must be numerous. He is, however, conscious that he has done it every justice in his power, and is convinced that the risk he runs of incurring the charge of inaccuracy, bears no proportion to the good that will arise from an attempt to promulgate knowledge of so great importance to the community.

PHILADELPHIA, AUGUST, 1814.

Communications containing corrections of the roads inserted, or descriptions of new roads, will oblige the publisher.
